

Dome Oil Co. Start Drilling

Still another oil company is starting to go after the liquid gold, this week, and this is a purely local concern.

The Dome Oil Co. have now leased a complete outfit from the National Explorations Co., and have moved the whole works on to their site which is situated on 13d. 7 on Section 31-45-0. This includes, besides the engines, boilers, machinery, etc., the bunk houses, camp cookhouse, and all necessary erections. These are now being set out in and around the company's own derrick (which has been erected for quite some time) and spudding in will take place at the beginning of next week.

It is proposed to work continuous drilling in 8-hour shifts, with the fast rotary disc bit, which piece of machinery holds the record for fast work, it is confidently expected that another well will be produced and hopes of a real 500-barrel well run high.

Driller Art Allison, who is among the best known "Mud-hogs" on the continent will be in full charge as field superintendent, and he will have with him at this site Drillers Pat Adams and Art Newburn in charge of the other shifts. These names speak well for the success of the venture, for they are all figured to be in the "go-getter" class when it comes to putting down an oil well—and doing it right! So that it may be only a matter of a few weeks before the "smile that won't come off" will adorn the faces of the holders of shares in the Dome company.

The finances have all been obtained for the drilling of this first hole, and arrangements are being closed for the financing of a second hole to be drilled this fall. It is proposed to continue the financing of the company to the point that a third and subsequent wells can be drilled with the company's own equipment.

TOWN FATHERS HAVE ONLY SHORT ROUTINE MEETING

Minutes of the Wainwright Town Council held in the Council Chamber on Friday evening last, when there were present: Mayor Cork, and Councilors Foster, Lissimore and Welch.

The minutes of the last regular meeting were read and on motion adopted.

A communication was read from the Wainwright Studio, submitting prices for the photographing and framing of photos of the Council for the year 1926.

Welch-Lissimore—That the communication from the Wainwright Studio be considered at the next regular meeting—Carried.

The committee on Rink Management reported as follows:

We recommend that immediate steps be taken to replace the cotton in the ventilators at the windows, also that a team and man be procured to lower the ground at the Southwest corner of the skating area so that it will be practically on the same level as the remaining portion of the skating surface, thereby saving a large amount of water in flooding.

That application be made to the Gas Company for supply of gas for the tank heating, also that radiators or gas heaters be installed in waiting rooms.

In regard to the management, would recommend that a lease be given the Wainwright Curling Club for a term of three or five years, as we are of the opinion that such satisfactory arrangements can be arrived at in that manner, and that your committee be instructed to arrange to meet the executive of Curling club, with the end in view to formulate an agreement to be placed before the Council at its next regular meeting.

The report was adopted by motion. The matter of appointing a utility man was considered from the applications to hand, and, on account of not having a full attendance of the Council, it was moved by Coun. Welch, seconded by Coun. Foster that the applications for utility man be held over until next regular meeting of Council—Carried.

Forster-Welch—That the resolution of June 4th, 1926, setting forth the date of sale of lots under the Tax Recovery Act of 1922 and the amendments thereto, be changed, making the date of sale on the 19th of November 1926—Carried.

The Council then adjourned.

PIPELINE FOR WAINWRIGHT FIELD IS NOW PLANNED

The big problem of transportation of crude which is one of the most vital factors, now facing operators in the Wainwright field may be overcome in the very near future as a result of the recent organization of the Plateau Oil Company, a concern holding a franchise to construct a pipe-line from the producing area to the railroad, to refineries in the district and other purchasers of crude oil at or near Wainwright.

Having been granted a permit by the Minister of Public Works and having secured the approval of the Public Utilities Board, this company plans to start construction of the line as soon as possible, in order to provide the means for oil now being produced and the oil expected to be produced from the field by next summer.

Plateau Oil Company is the only concern enjoying these privileges. In addition to owning the pipe-line franchise, the company controls oil and gas rights on 840 acres of land distributed throughout the Wainwright-Fabian field, the development or disposal of which will depend on the wishes of the stockholders.

Plateau Oil Company has secured a Dominion charter and is capitalized at 300,000 shares of 100 par value. The first issue comprising 200,000 shares at one dollar each will be offered to the public very shortly.

The officers of the company are all of Edmonton. The proposed pipe-line which the company intends to construct and operate will be 2 1/2 inch welded joint pipe approximately six miles in length and will run from the producing area down the meridian line between ranges 7 and 7 to the railway at Wainwright. Gathering lines will be laid from producing wells in the field and branch delivery lines will be laid to a loading rack on the railway, and to the Kings Del refinery, now under construction.

A full line of equipment necessary to the receipt, transport and delivery of crude oil is planned and will include the latest improved Diesel type of fuel-burning engines, duplex horizontal line pumps, line heaters, steam-cooled storage tanks, boiler capacity to ensure the successful handling of crude throughout the year, houses for employees, boiler, pump, and engine houses and all other equipment essential to the industry.

Cost of construction of the whole system is estimated to be $100,000 and the pumps will have a capacity of 20,000 barrels of crude a day.

SIREN ALARM BRINGS CROWD TO 1st AVE BLAZE

On Monday evening last, while the Rebekah whist drive was at its height, the alarm was sounded for a fire which was raging at the Braceridge cottage on First avenue.

From what can be learned it would seem that the fire started from the chimney running through the attic in the roof, and in a very few minutes it had burned its way through the shingles, giving the appearance of the whole roof ablaze.

Mr. Braceridge, who was asleep in the adjoining bedroom with the two children was awakened by the crier of the baby, and noticing the blaze immediately, gave the alarm, and moved the kiddies to the Whittles house adjoining.

Fire-chief Richardson with his whole brigade, except one man off duty, was quickly on the job, and with a bucket brigade at work on the outside and the chemical hoses inside the house soon got the fire under control.

A large crowd quickly gathered and some of these left it hard to remove some of the contents of the house to save further loss than possible, but although the actual fire was quickly checked a great deal of damage was done to the furniture especially in the front rooms. The fire burned its way practically all through the attic on the south front, as well as down through the ceilings of the front rooms, and considering the terrific wind which was blowing at the time it is marvellous that the building was saved at all, this testifying to the good work done by the fire ladders.

We understand that some insurance is carried on both the building and its contents, although Mr. Braceridge is bound to sustain some loss from the fire, and also to the brisance.

WAINWRIGHT CONSTITUENCY W.I. CONVENTION

The Wainwright Constituency W.I. Convention will be held in Knox church, Ribstone on Wednesday September 22nd. Afternoon session commences at 2:15. Evening session at 7:30.

The District Director Mrs. Gates of Stoney Plains will be present. Super will be served to all visiting delegates.

A full program has been arranged and it is hoped that this convention will prove beneficial to all. Everybody is welcome to attend the sessions.

MR & MRS J. LAIRD BEREAVED BY LOSS OF FIRST BORN

The sympathies of the whole neighborhood are being expressed to Mr. and Mrs. Jack Laird upon the loss on Thursday last of their wee son and heir, "Little Billy," who has been ailing for some time with summer complaint, the wee fellow being six months and three days old.

The funeral took place on Saturday last at the Wainwright cemetery when the Rev. G. Pybus conducted the ceremony, with McLeod's parlors in charge.

CARD OF THANKS

Mr. and Mrs. J. Laird wish to express their heart felt thanks to all friends and sympathizers in their bereavement and for the floral tributes.

GEOLOGISTS HAVE MANY THEORIES ON ORIGIN OF OIL

There are lots of people who can tell you how oil originated and all about it. But the hardest man in the world to get to say with any degree of definiteness regarding the origin of oil is a geologist, who, one might suppose, would be the man who would know most about it. They all have their theories, of course, but they do not speak with anything like the assurance of the man who has read three prospectuses, placed at a government report (and own) an odd lot of 12 shares of Beyer.

Down at a recent meeting of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists held in Texas, there was an outstanding consulting geologist of that state got up before a thousand other geologists and said that the origin of oil was an unsolved query. The speaker was William E. Wrather of Dallas, and during the course of his remarks as given in petroleum journals reporting the convention said:

"The first topic of dealing with the origin of oil we have ever with us," said Mr. Wrather, "has been unanswered by today arouses as active and diverse discussion after years of speculation as it did when petroleum geology was in its infancy.

"We are agreed, perhaps, that oil is of organic origin, but at that point our agreements end. We are unable to state with certainty the types of organic life, whether plant or animal which contributed the hydrocarbons from which any particular type of oil was evolved. We are in doubt whether it originated in liquid form or passed its primary stage as a solid.

"Our efforts as petroleum geologists have been largely directed toward methods of locating structure and this continues to be our major aim. We are hunters in pursuit of game whose habits we understand imperfectly. We have perhaps discovered the favorite type of hiding place of our quarry, but our agreements end. We are unable to state with certainty the types of organic life, whether plant or animal which contributed the hydrocarbons from which any particular type of oil was evolved. We are in doubt whether it originated in liquid form or passed its primary stage as a solid.

"Hence a discussion of the origin of oil will remain a timely topic perhaps for some time to come. It will continue to be worthy, our while to occasionally take stock of our theories and come to some conclusion as to how far we have succeeded in reducing them to demonstrated facts.

"Petroleum geology is in a constant state of flux; and an adaptable mind is required to keep pace with its progress. It is perhaps well to consider that 11 years ago I (continued on page 6)

MR H SPENCER M.P. IS RETURNED BY LARGE MAJORITY

The elections of last week certainly proved that the King government will return to power with a substantial working majority.

To date, so far as full returns are available, the standing of the several parties in the Federal House is as follows:

Liberal-Progressives	119
Progressive	7
Conservatives	91

Total seats 245. In the Battle River riding, Mr. Spencer, the former member was returned by a large majority over Mr. J. W. Morrison, of Vermilion, (C) the figures, so far as can be learned, being: Spencer 5273; Morrison 1928. As there are yet two polls to be held from the final result may alter the latter's figures; but without a big addition to his totals he will lose his deposit.

In the polls situated within the bounds of the Wainwright province the following results:

So far as the new ministry is concerned there is nothing definite in hand although it would seem likely that Hon. Chas. Stewart, who this term will represent W. Edmonton will again be in charge of the portfolio of Minister of Interior.

Representation by Provinces

The British North America Act which created Confederation, enacted that the first House of Commons should contain 181 seats. It also provided a basis of distribution of the seats among the four charter Provinces, this basis to apply to future distributions as other Provinces entered Confederation or were created out of the Territories. The distribution of the 181 seats among the four charter Provinces was—Nova Scotia, 19; New Brunswick, 15; Quebec, 65; Ontario, 82. In 1870 Manitoba was created and given 4 seats; British Columbia joined Confederation in 1871 and was given 6 seats; and Prince Edward Island joining in 1873 was also given 6 seats.

The 65 seats given to Quebec and the population of Quebec were made the perpetual basis of distribution. The unit of representation, that is, the number of people to have one representative in the House of Commons is obtained by dividing the number of the population of that Province by 65. This unit of representation then determines the number of seats each of the other Provinces is to have. Quebec's representation is fixed—always 65, never more and never less. The unit of representation by Province is, therefore, a problem of Proportion or the old rule of three, which may be stated in this way—as 65 is to the population of Quebec, so shall the number of seats assigned to each of the other Provinces be to the population of that Province.

The British North America Act also provides that a census shall be taken every tenth year beginning with 871, and that Parliament at its session next after the completion of the census shall rearrange the representation in the House of Commons so as to give each Province the number of seats to which it is entitled according to its population.

REBEKAHS HOLD FIRST WHIST DRIVE OF SEASON

The first whist drive of the season was staged on Monday evening, by the local lodge of Rebekahs, and a real good time was enjoyed by those who were in attendance. The prize winners were:

Ladies—Mrs. W. Arkwright, 1; Mr. Milner, 2; Mrs. Harvey, 3. Gents—Messrs W. Lilly, 1; W. Carrell, 2; M. Milner, 3. Refreshments were served at the closing of the game.

WHY THE ELECTRIC LIGHTS WERE OUT ON SUNDAY NIGHT

In answer to the many enquiries as to the reason for the lack of electric light on Sunday last, we are happy to state that the cause justified the inconvenience. The fact is that the new boiler at the power house was being "hooked up" and the job took a little longer than had been figured. However, "all's well that ends well." This is a matter for congratulation by the ratepayers when it is considered that Superintendent Doug and his staff (ably assisted by Mr. Mayor Cork) in only two days completed the whole of the new extra heavy line direct to the engine, new high pressure valve, and replacing the old heater. It is expected that the boiler inspector will be down this week to test the new portion of the plant and that it will be in operation right away. At the end of the week also the "new feed water heater is due to arrive and it is to be installed as soon as it gets here.

VALENTINO HAS WONDERFUL RIVAL IN TOM TYLER

Tom Tyler, the new western star who was heralded from Hollywood as the most sensational discovery since Valentino, is all that was said about him; and if he continues to enjoy such vehicles as "Let's Go, Gals!" showing Friday and Saturday at the theatre, it won't be long before he has the feminine hearts of the country in the hollow of one brawny nature.

Nature was generous to the point of lavishness with young Tyler. He is over six feet tall, but so perfectly proportioned that he does not look like height. An infectious smile, classic features that still manage to be rugged, and real dramatic ability combine with his daring horsemanship to make him an all-round hero in any company; and "Let's Go, Gals!" gives him oodles of action, as well as a lot of sympathy and humor.

The production which has been ably directed by James Gruen and Robert De Lacey from the script by Percy Heath, deals with the difficult task of an incident young cowboy who suddenly finds himself made foreman of a ranch belonging to a girl. At the men under him, save one rheumatic relic named Blenny Mulligan, have it in for the new foreman as well as the pretty owner. The complication which follows are sensational in the extreme, and keep the interest at fever pitch from the first look to the last. Thrilling fights and some marvelous rescues are high spots in the picture. The cast in adequate all around, and Tyler himself is a wallop in the title role.

Mrs. W. Robinson was entertaining as her guest for a couple of days Mrs. Adamson, of Vancouver, who has now left for Regina.

Mr. Bill Stuart made a hurried trip to Calgary on business last week.

The latest redistribution was completed at the session of Parliament of 1924, and the representation then provided is in existence today. It provides for a House of Commons containing 245 seats, distributed as follows:

Provinces	Seats
Prince Edward Island	4
Nova Scotia	14
New Brunswick	11
Ontario	65
Manitoba	17
Saskatchewan	10
Alberta	10
British Columbia	14
Yukon Territory	1
Total	245

Hospital Meeting Gets Good Crowd

That interest is being taken in the fact of "To be or not to be" with regard to the needs of the Wainwright hospital district, was proven on Sunday last when quite a large attendance gathered at the theatre to hear the pros and cons discussed.

Owing to the fact of the installation of the new boiler at the power house (as described elsewhere in this issue) the meeting had to open with the aid of improvised lights, but this defect was remedied before the meeting closed.

Mr. Whiston, the provincial supervisor, who had been announced to speak, was unavoidably absent, he having been hurriedly to Stettin on the previous day, and was there unable to get here. However, Chairman W. Bowen had good support on the platform, and all who spoke to the meeting added some weight to the argument that a hospital is necessary as well as desirable for the territory which is included in the proposed Wainwright Municipal Hospital scheme.

The Rev. A. Love and the Rev. G. Pybus both spoke in full sympathy with the movement, and Mr. J. McLeod spoke at length upon the subject, pointing out that the death rate over the province showed an increase of over seventeen per cent, in districts which are lacking in hospital facilities and accommodation.

Mr. W. Huntingford spoke at length on the project both from the human and financial standpoint as well as from the angle of the financial stability of the scheme, pointing out that as at present situated, people desiring hospital treatment from this district were forced to pay as much for the railway journey alone as will eventually pay the hospital taxes for several years. With regard to the security of the scheme, he showed that there are at present operating under the scheme not less than sixteen such institutions, and all of these without exception had at the present time a cash surplus.

In dealing with the work accomplished in the municipal hospitals of the province during the past five years, Mr. and Mrs. E. Cotton who have been spending a holiday at Banff have been returned.

Several cars of cattle are being shipped out these days; quite a number of cattle buyers having made the rounds of the farms.

INSTALLATION OF NATURAL GAS LINE NEARING COMPLETION

The "wise virgins" have been commended all down the ages for their wonderful foresight, and the story forms a happy simile for those of our citizens who have already made the necessary arrangements for the installation of gas into their homes and have made application for the necessary service connections.

This week sees practically all the main line pipes of the large size entrenched, this covering to date all of blocks 15, 16, 17, 18, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 28, 29 and 30. The pressure line from the regulator station to the C.N.R. roundhouses and shops and to the Alberta Pacific elevator is all installed as well as the low pressure line to the Creamery.

As at present worked out, the main feed line runs north from First avenue to Ninth avenue on Main street, then westerly to Alberta street, and south to the regulator station which is situated on lots 3 and 3 in block 2. From the feeder other smaller lines are at present branching in several directions and branches will be put in for adjoining other blocks where the applications for service warrant their installations.

The pipe gangs are busy coupling up, and in many instances the trenches are already back-filled. The larger size mains for the transmission line from the well and the low pressure feeder main pipes are due to arrive this week. Pipe-laying gangs will then be started on their way to the gas well, and the finishing up work in the town itself will be completed by the end of the week.

Get your application in at once either for the connection or for your private service laying on your property, and be assured that as soon as the gas is available you will be in a position to take full advantage of this most modern addition to civilization. Her attendant was her sister, Miss Helen Akroyd, who was gowned in a Paris model of hand-painted chiffon, with chiffon cape in shades of cream, and a train of white tulle draped from the shoulders. Mr. Jack Turner, of Edmonton, supported the bridegroom.

The dining table was set with white and mauve, with a large white cake, topped by a vast of tiny pink roses, the whole resting on a mirror base wreathed in pale shades of tulle. THE GOLDEN COCOON RUTH CROSS

"The Golden Cocoon" with Helen Chadwick is a picturization of this novel
by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
Copyright, 1926, by Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.

A step or so behind them was Stephen Renfro—handsome, leisurely better tailored even than old. He advanced into the room with that graceful admixture of languor and naive insolence which he liked best to affect. "Who's talking about robbers and thieves?" he interrupted the blond and explosive young woman to ask again, in his most humorously telling drawl.

Before anyone could answer—if there was such an inclination—Mrs. Susan Renfro moved quickly toward Cochran with outstretched hands. "Of course, our first call would be for you and dear Mrs. Cochran," she declared, with a charming glance of deference at the older woman. "Stephen says we're quite mad—coming down here in this heat, but I think there's nowhere one can be so comfortable in hot weather as in one's own home. I'm sure you'll bear me out in that, Mrs. Cochran."

She was fairly launched on a topic which would have done service for the next two hours had not Cochran stepped aside to prevent Molly, who had remained until that moment to all intent and purposes concealed.

Renfro, who was coming up to speak to Cochran, let his hand drop rather precipitately as Molly's name was mentioned. He recovered almost immediately, though, his usual sang froid, and stood taking in the scene with full appreciation of its dramatic possibilities. His wife stared frankly at Molly's simple gown, said something more or less polite, and—transferred her entire attention again to her host. Renfro bowed in turn, but did not, as he had apparently first intended, offer his hand. Mrs. Cochran had gone back to the tea table, where fresh supplies were being brought in. Susan still monopolized the room. There was just one thing for Renfro to do and he did it as gracefully as possible.

He drew up a chair and seated himself near Molly, leaned toward her—the humorous quirk to the left corner of his mouth very noticeable. "And thus—we meet again?" he murmured in the most approved mock-melodramatic fashion.

Molly studied him for a moment or two in silence before she said "Yes. It seems your returns are as sudden and—as unheralded—as your departures."

"Bravo!" he laughed, applauding softly. "Not half bad, really. By the way," he looked anxiously from her to Cochran and lifted inquiring eyebrows—"my little Molly has certainly been making hay in the interim!"

Molly saved the necessity of a reply by Cochran's joining them. Released from attendance on Mrs. Susan, he drew up a chair and settled himself in it with what would have been a less punctilious man a sigh of deliverance.

"You haven't told me yet about the robbers and thieves," Renfro reminded him, turning from Molly to let his gaze wander curiously over the room. "Have you been having a burglary?"

"Cochran gave him an odd look; there was more even than the usual discrepancy between his slow smile and the shrewd black lightning of his eyes. "No," he was only agreeing with Miss Shannon here that our state seems to be falling among robbers and thieves."

Renfro leaned forward—almost forgot his habitual nonchalance. "Ah, that's exactly what I wanted to talk to you about," he declared with satisfaction. "It rests with us, younger men."

He broke off, frowning, as his wife struck in unexpectedly and a shade too eagerly from the tea table. "Stephen's to go in for politics, you know. I said nothing could be happier than for him and Greg to get together and talk things over."

"Just so," Renfro possessed himself again of the conversational reins. "With our influence and backing—the way he spoke already of 'our backing' was entirely typical—and your prestige, why—we could run this state pretty much to suit ourselves."

There was a slight pause. He looked expectantly at Cochran, whose face ever slow to reflect his thoughts were now its most noncommittal mask. "No doubt we could," he conceded finally.

A clock chimed the hour of six, and Molly rose. Six-fifteen was the dinner hour at the dormitory. She felt Renfro's amused irritated eyes on her—irritated because he had not quite made his point—as she went over to say good-by to Mrs. Cochran. She knew, too, that his wife was appraising contemptuously every item of her inexpensive homelike appear-

el. Neither circumstance troubled her. During the brief scene, her mind had been busy with comparisons. She had never seen Stephen Renfro for what he actually was until he rashly set himself up beside Gregory Cochran. The latter had excused himself and was accompanying her to the door. They were on the porch now, and she stared off somberly across the shimmering vista of lawn and garden the puzzled, hurt frown was between her brows. "But I'm keeping you from your guest."

"Facing him on the topmost step, she reached up for the parasol, which he had opened for her against the sun."

Instead of surrendering it, he moved down the steps beside her. "Mother's quite sufficient to cope with them, in his eyes." A moment later, "By the way, I hope you're going to let me come to see you sometime in that little home of yours—Laws' Chapel."

"Let you!" Molly echoed, trying to laugh as though her heart had not omitted a good half dozen beats. "It would be nothing short of a visitation from Paradise, but—I'm sure you don't"

"I hope you're going to let me see that little home of yours—Laws' Chapel..."

...suspect what my home is really like."

"It wasn't the home I had in mind to come to."

CHAPTER XX
Molly's home-coming differed perhaps only in degree and intensity from that of other girls who have been away to college. It was like entering upon a new life, or more accurately, a reincarnation of some old, disasteful, all-but-forgotten one. Laws' Chapel, the children—her mother—were changed, alien, separated from her by insurmountable distances.

But whatever unholy thoughts went on inside her, she kept unqualifiedly to herself. If her mother had some dim notion of them, it was through a species of divination.

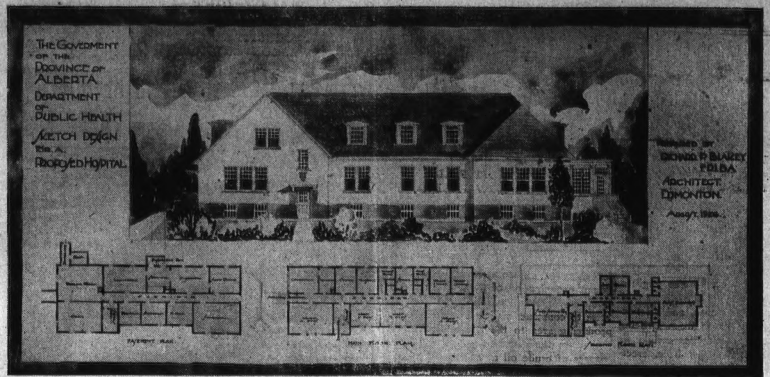

The latter she found failing indeed and pitifully glad of a strong young arm to lean upon. The house looked not quite so down at heels as of old. Lenny had kept it at least watertight and the fences and outhouses were trim and trim. Both he and Larry now strapping lads of seventeen worked out by the day, and their wages were a godsend. Jo and Cynthia, who had as yet no children of their own, had taken two of the younger boys to live with them. Aunt Lena gave Wilbur, the third oldest, his board and keep for helping around the place. Blossom had married a prosperous man in town, kept a maid and a carriage and patronized it generally over the rest of the family.

Larry had passed the university examinations and was saving jealously every cent that could be spared from the home budget with the hope of beginning a law course in the fall. Here Molly drove her first wedge in the latent distrust and hostility with which not only the village, but her own brothers and sisters, regarded her. "Larry was her ancient foe; bitterest opponent and keenest satirist of various blundering attempts in the past to raise the level of the family culture and manners. When she offered to contribute a small amount each month toward his expense in school if he would earn the rest, his shy, surprised gratitude and vehement joy touched her deeply. A bond was established never altogether to be broken."

With the others, Blossom and Cynthia in particular, she did not succeed so well. The former Mrs. William Jonathan Leeds, as the handsomely engraved new cards proclaimed her, appreciated fully what she had done for herself. On her very occasional visits she made audible remarks about people who wasted four years in college and then couldn't do any better than come home and teach a little

THE RURAL MUNICIPAL HOSPITAL

The Proposed Building

WHAT IS IT FOR ?

1 To provide proper nursing care and hospital care for you and your family at the most economical cost.

HOW LARGE IS IT ?

1 The building will accommodate approximately twenty-five adult patients, with extra equipment for use when needed.

HOW WILL IT BE EQUIPPED ?

With an up-to-date and complete operating room and all necessary appliances, a case room and nursery, and all wards will be furnished with modern and scientific hospital equipment. An X-Ray will also be provided. The hospital will also be fitted with modern sanitary conveniences.

HOW WILL IT BE FINANCED ?

By the issue of debentures in a sum not exceeding $37,500.00 repayment of same spread over a period of twenty years. The annual expenditures for maintenance, operation and repayment of debentures will be provided by a levy on the assessed valuation of all lands within the hospital district.

HOW MUCH WILL IT COST TO MAINTAIN ?

The scheme provides for an estimated revenue of $20,236.25, which amount includes $12,386.25 as an apportionment from the contributing areas. If all the taxes are paid and all patients fees paid in full within the current year the hospital should show a surplus of approximately $811.25 after providing for all expenditures, including one-twentieth of principal with accrued interest on capital account.

IS IT AN EXPERIMENT ?

No. There are sixteen Municipal Hospitals operating in the Province now, and one building. All are giving eminently satisfactory hospital service to the people of the district. Every Municipal Hospital at the end of 1925 had a cash surplus and several of the Hospital Districts have sufficient surplus cash on hand to enable them to carry on for the present year without borrowing from the bank. From January 1st, 1926, to December 31st, 1925, Municipal Hospitals took care of 31,766 patients with hospital days of 361,022; 5,435 maternity cases were taken care of and 6,236 minor and 3,266 major operations were performed in these institutions during that period.

The Municipal Hospitals now in operation serve a population of approximately 155,000 people. Municipal Hospital organization is being effected in other portions of the Province combining areas which are slightly in excess of ninety townships.

Innisfail Municipal Hospital vote on January 30th, 1926, resulted in 1119 for and 409 against. 101 over the two-thirds required. The vote, on Saturday, February 27th, 1926, to add parts of two townships to the Drumheller Municipal Hospital District, carried by a majority of 26 to 2, as did also the vote to add half a township to the Onoway district by 16 to 0 the same day. Innisfail will be opened on October 15th.

There have been no increases in taxes or rates in any Municipal Hospital since the first hospital was erected in 1919. There have been several reductions in taxes.

HOW CAN YOU FIND OUT IF THE HOSPITALS ARE SUCCESSFUL ?

By communicating with the Secretaries, Superintendents or any member of any Municipal Hospital Board in the Province. Following are the Secretary-Treasurers of the Municipal Hospital Districts of Alberta: Manville, No. 1, J. Aiken; Vermilion, No. 2, D. Taylor; Drumheller, No. 3, S. P. Williams; Idley, No. 4, A. Beecroft; Cardston, No. 5, H. Nelson; Bassano, No. 6, H. W. Ford; Onoway, No. 7, A. A. Brown; Lloydminster, No. 8, S. H. Leonard; Hanna, No. 9, L. Greenwood; Viking, No. 10, H. Rollins; High River, No. 11, G. Mack; Provost, No. 12, A. W. Fiske; Athabasca, No. 13, M. W. Hitchins; Grande Prairie, No. 14, J. Sawyer; Red Deer, No. 15, A. T. Stephenson. The hospitals operating nearest to Wainwright are at Viking, Manville, Vermilion, Idley and Provost.

IS IT ECONOMICAL ?

The difference is enough saved to pay the hospital tax on 320 acres for 8 years.

In addition to the actual hospital benefits as described above, another big feature of the scheme is the availability of a Public Health Nurse, who arranges for a periodical examination of all school children in the Hospital District at no expense to the parents or School Boards.

WHEN WILL THE VOTING TAKE PLACE ?

SATURDAY, OCTOBER 2ND, 1926

WHO MAY VOTE ?

The persons entitled to vote on the scheme shall be all persons who are liable for Municipal and Improvement District taxes and the wife or husband of the aforementioned person and any son or daughter of the age of at least twenty-one years, residing within such hospital district. All such persons whose names do not appear upon the last revised Municipal Voters' List may vote by subscribing to a declaration set out in Form "D" in the schedule of the Municipal Hospital Act.

It is not necessary for a voter to vote at a poll where he or she appears on the Municipal Hospital Voters' List, but the voter may vote at any polling place within the Hospital District by subscribing to a declaration in form "D" which reads as follows:

The undersigned solemnly affirms,—

1. That he is of the full age of twenty-one years;
2. That he is liable to pay Municipal or Improvement taxes in Hospital District No.
3. That he owes no Hospital taxes;
4. That he owes no money to the Board of Hospital District.

The undersigned solemnly affirms that he or she is the husband or wife or father or mother or son or daughter of who lives within Hospital District No. and is liable to pay Municipal or Improvement District taxes therein, and that he or she is of the full age of twenty-one years and lives with the said (wife, husband etc., respectively), and that he or she has not before voted at this poll. WAINWRIGHT, ALBERTA SEPTEMBER 22nd, 1926

WHY THIS DELAY?

A SUGGESTION.

During the past year or so the Wainwright field has developed from a possible oil-bearing area to a proven oil-producing territory with almost unlimited possibilities. Not only has this fact been indicated by the actual bringing-in of several wells each yielding more than 100 barrels of good commercial oil a day, but it has been endorsed by recognized authorities in close touch with the field. The structural formation of the Wainwright oil area is known to be without serious fault and highly favorable to the production of oil and gas at almost any point. What is the reason, therefore, why the disappointing delays in reaching production which have been encountered by the crews of at least three wells drilled in the field? Why is it that some wells can be made to produce a good flow of oil easily and promptly while others require weeks and months to bring in the well even after the producing formation has been reached? asks the Oil and Gas News.

These questions are being asked in all seriousness by the oil-interested public of the West and many solutions of the problem are being offered. In one fact alone is the public of an unanimous opinion; that there is good oil at Wainwright and it is available if sought by proper methods and by experienced men.

Some criticism has been levelled at the widely different methods which have been employed in bringing-in wells of the producing sand and has reached and it is probable that this viewpoint of the situation may lead nearer to the true solution of the difficulties than any other.

There may be many ways of successfully bringing-in a good well but there is only one best way and in several recent cases it is known that the best way obviously was not employed. If the field is to yield its best results there can be no room for doubt or difference of opinion as to what is needed when an emergency arises. The proper method of handling the situation is not only the most economical but it is the one that will create the greatest public confidence in the possibilities of the field.

Wrong tactics and bad judgment not only prove to be disconcertingly expensive but they destroy public confidence. A logical way to avoid such unfortunate mistakes has occurred in the past would be for active companies in the field to share, on a prorata basis, the expense of engaging a general field superintendent whose knowledge and experience would qualify him to advise in all field work and whose word would be acceptable to all drilling crews.

This man would have to be an acknowledged expert who could be relied upon at all times to give out sound suggestions, and he would be expected to answer for all errors in drilling policy on the part of the companies engaging him. He would probably demand a large salary for his services but if he saved time and money for the operators, he would be worth his hire. In addition to the economic factor, his presence in the field would encourage smaller companies who, in ordinary circumstances might be unable to afford high-priced advice but who could manage to pay a proportion of the great man's salary and thus obtain expert opinion regarding their field operations.

The plan outlined in the foregoing paragraphs is not new. It has been suggested many times and has been carried out on a small scale in the southern part of the province, with marked success. Recent discussion in connection with the comparatively slow progress being made in the Wainwright field has revived the subject which is worthy of consideration in view of existing conditions.

WHY MONEY LEAVES HOME

Much has been said in reference to the farmer sending his money to the mail order house instead of spending it in his home town. We all know that money sent away helps to make the community poor also, that taxes are liable to get a little higher. The farmer has been blamed by the storekeeper, who says "Here I have carried that farmer while he has been putting his crop in. He owes me and now that he has sold his grain he doesn't know where my store is and is sending his money out of the town." Now, we all know that this has happened. Who is to blame? The farmer is to blame, and the storekeeper is to blame. The blame is a fifty-fifty proposition.

We will now get down to facts and analyze the storekeeper's side of the question. Store keepers throughout the west have had a tough proposition making both ends meet. They have for years educated the farmers, to send their money away from home. The mail order houses believe in advertising. You know the big catalogue with the pretty colored pictures that the whole family take to turn to look through, and when the baby is cross the catalogue is thrown on the rug to pacify the child. The farmer's child is educated practically from birth to take an interest in the mail order house, and as she or he grows the idea becomes more and more cemented in its brain that the only place to buy merchandise is from the mail order house. This is a fact, is it not, Mr. Merchant? What are you going to do to counteract this? Do you send out any advertising? You are known only in your little town or district, but the mail order house is known the length and breadth of Canada. What made it so? Advertising. That's all. The knowledge that you have the goods for sale will not sell them. You have to let the people know. You remember that it has happened that a mer-

SPEED IS A MATTER OF STEADY PACE

BY ERWIN GREER

President Greer—College of Automotive & Electrical Trades, Chicago, Ill.

"The car you are driving is probably capable of a speed of from sixty to seventy miles an hour—but you cannot use this speed for any length of time without flitting with the angels. The modern highway, while built like a speedway, isn't a one-way proposition like the race track. Therefore, the driver who speeds must always make frequent and nerve racking stops which cut down his average time to a minimum. His speed is far below that of the driver who maintains a steady pace hour after hour.

What is speeding? Since it is the primary cause of a majority of all automobile accidents, isn't it about time that it is plainly defined.

A great many motorists think that there is something magically safe about motoring, when the speedometer hugs close to 20 miles an hour. Yet speeding can happen at any speed.

One driver has discovered that much can be learned about speeding, by driving the car with the speedometer disconnected. For the test he secured the services of a friend who followed him over a prescribed course, in another car. The driver with the disconnected speedometer proceeded just as he would under normal conditions, and then checked up with the actual speed record, as noted by the friend following him. The results were surprising. Invariably he drove from 5 to 15 miles an hour faster than he thought he was going.

This was particularly noticeable in traffic and in going down hill on the open highway.

An interesting thing happened on one of these tests. The sudden appearance of another car, turning in from a crossroad, called for the quickest possible stop. The driver without a speedometer actually failed to stop in time to avoid a collision, just because he thought he was stopping quickly enough and never bothered to reach for the emergency, until it was too late.

The experiment showed plainly that the average driver cannot stop his speed—and that he invariably goes faster than he thinks. It shows that a car driver is speeding, whenever his conception of a safe stopping distance is less than the actual stopping distance. Putting two and two together, this experiment shows that a driver who drives without a speedometer, or who does not watch his speedometer, is speeding—at any speed.

THE TEN COMMANDMENTS

(For Young Wives)

1. Don't commit indiscretions that lay you open to suspicion of grave things.
2. Don't treat your husband as if he were omnipotent and then complain later because he believes it himself.
3. Don't treat your husband as if he were a trespasser in his own home.
4. Don't sing the praises of other women's husbands, suggesting how much more generous they are than your husband.

BOOTLEG JOURNALISM

We have just received from a southern city a copy of a so-called "newspaper" of "free distribution," that contains a lot of advertising but little to justify calling it a newspaper. Business men who fall for this sort of publication are wasting a good deal of money that would not be wasted were it spent for advertising in legitimate publications.

The strongest argument against this sort of "free distribution" newspaper is that there are so few of them in the world. It is a very old scheme. Some have survived—but they are few and far between.

The daily newspaper is proven to be the best advertising medium there is. The second best is the weekly. Expert advertising men whose business it is to study their object, long ago ceased to even calculate the advertising value of the so-called "free distribution" journals, for they have none.

WHY MONEY

LEAVES HOME

When in your town has failed and the creditors have come out with big bills like a circus, you scoffed and said it was a waste of money. But the stock was sold while you were looking at it. There are ways of keeping money in the home town. One is that you turn your credit business into cash and the people will then buy only what they want. They will pay for it when they need it and will not have the money to send out, therefore the benefit will be the local merchant's. Let the people know through your local paper, or through bills what you have to sell. Give the people bargains. By selling for cash you will be able to work on a small profit. When you decide to do this, let the people know you are going after the business, and don't wait until it comes to you. Use a monthly or weekly bulletin, and after a while the mail order house will not worry you. Meet it with its own weapons—Advertising.

MARY THE THIRD IS SCREENED AS "WINE OF YOUTH"

King Vidor, the brilliant young Metro-Goldwyn director, is proving himself one of the most versatile of the Hollywood megaphone kings. His latest production, "Wine of Youth," a film version of Rachel Crothers' stage success, "Mary, the Third," is as highly original and entertaining as it is different from his previous productions.

"It is a story of modern youth, but it is free from the hollow and artificial jazz of the series of 'youth' thrillers. Vidor makes his flappers and 'crazy-crazy' human. He deals with their lives with understanding and much humor and originality.

The story opens in 1924, with Mary The Third, an up-to-date flapper, being pursued by the contrasting suitors.

Eleanor Boardman plays the three Marys in their youth. In the third or modern episode, Eulalie Jensen is the mother and Gertrude Claire the grandmother. The two brief vignettes provide a wealth of leading men for Vidor's production. James Morrison and Johnnie Walker are first Mary's suitors; Miles Welch and Creighton Hale are the lovers in the second, and Ben Lyon and William Haines in the third.

Shown tonight and tomorrow night (Thursday) at the theatre.

HOUSE HEATING

BY USE OF GAS

UNIVERSAL SOON

From the standpoint of fuel conservation and smoke abatement, gas is the ultimate fuel for house heating and sooner or later will be very largely used, according to William L. Hoyt, engineer of the industrial sales department of the Rochester Gas Corporation.

"Gas home heating is admitted to be the perfect heat for the home," says Mr. Hoyt. "Gas is the easiest fuel to burn. It may be readily controlled. The fuel supply is always at command with the continuity assured by the local gas company. The basement, instead of being devoted almost entirely to a heating plant and fuel storage, will be spotlessly clean and suitable for a play-room, den or whatever the owner wishes.

"The present trend in gas manufacture points to a cheaper product which will greatly increase the yield. This is the goal of every gas company. The manufacture of gas is, of course, a matter of quantity production and consequently the future price will have a decided downward trend, while the price of solid fuels has always followed the law of supply and demand and must steadily increase."

New Telephone Rates are Necessary

BECAUSE

The old rates failed to provide any reserve provision for depreciation or storm damage on an investment by the people of the Province of $22,956, 148.57.

The old rates barely paid for operating expenses and interest charges on the capital debt.

The interest charges on the capital debt and on the reserve fund are fixed and must be paid.

Operating expenses have been cut by $120,000 per station in the last few years and can be cut no further without seriously impairing the service.

The added revenues will secure adequate protection of the investment and put the telephone utility on a sound financial basis.

The individual subscriber's share of the increase is small and he receives dollar for dollar of his rental in good service.

With adequate and fair rates, Alberta's Telephone System is second to none in America. As a subscriber you appropriate this.

Texaco Oils

The Oil You Will Eventually Buy!

A recommendation from one of Wainwright's Leading Citizens:

Re TEXACO OIL

Gentlemen: I have tried out "Texaco" oil in my own car, and after driving over 800 miles I am entirely satisfied with the quality. My engine developed more power; and on a long run showed more pressure on the oil gauge.

I hope to be able to always secure TEXACO in future for my car.—Yours very truly country school? Cynthia had some lingering doubts, perhaps, as to her Jo.

Molly accepted their gratitude without comment. Her tongue had, lost through the woods. City schools might be successfully conducted on perfume, but at last the alphabet of self-control; something, too, of the grim, continual necessity for compromise.

Her school work was monotonous and tiresome, but the salary was an unutterable boon; a genuine source of satisfaction and self-respect. Already one or two of the old acres that she ranked were wiped out. Her father's usual routine. She picked stray bits of paper, straightened the books on the desk, brushed a little heap of for on the new house, but the summer school she had secured at Carleton Place, five miles away, would take care of that. Larry was making marvelous strides at the university. Things were looking up a little for the shiftless Shannons.

The letters were events to be looked forward to, exciting breaks in the Lays' Chapel monotony. Every time Ollie Sears put one of the big, vigorously inscribed envelopes into her hands, Lays' Chapel and all that and therein was, receded from her like a tide going out. And in its place was Cochran, sane, wholesome, full of kindly concern, yet expecting a good deal of her.

He had found it necessary to make several trips East during the winter, and the anticipated visit to the north of the state and Lays' Chapel was thus unavoidably postponed. He was interested in Molly's reports about the new house, about her work and the gradual adjustment to conditions. Of what he himself was doing, he said little.

Something of this she inferred from the newspapers. The political situation was taking on sizable proportions. Texas had been the first state to adopt the policy of strangling corporation control in its infancy. It was strange or be strangled, and the up-and-coming young state had a mind to run its own affairs. Laws with teeth and a loaded club had been enacted against any combination in restraint of trade.

Step by step, year after year, the fight had been carried to the Supreme Court itself. One of the most insolent and rapacious of the nation's trusts stood convicted and was ordered to pay fines in excess of one and one half millions; also to dissolve or else take itself bag and baggage out of the state. Reduced to such straits, it turned—not in vain—to the handsome junior Senator. Republic he was not impossibly styled in the company's secret telegraph code. The tallest and cleanest Democrat in the state, he styled himself, and proclaimed the wicked machinations of his 'enemies' far and wide.

One April afternoon toward the close of her first school term she had been kept later than usual at the old front, facing her—and then and only gray-weathered school-house by a troop of irrepressibles. The call of it was almost an hour later when spring woods, spring skies and fields proved stronger than any mere de-sultory interest in battles and partial payments. Again a Molly was tempted to declare a holiday and take her restive little tribe for a tramp through the woods. City schools might be successfully conducted on perfume, but at last the alphabet of self-control; something, too, of the grim, continual necessity for compromise.

When the last rebel had gone, letting loose a war-whoop outside that rattled the mildewed stones in the old graveyard over beyond the oak grove. Molly busied herself absently with the exact hue of the April sky through the windows, and took down a white in the Lays' Chapel monotony. Every sun-bonnet from its peg.

Eager as she had been for release, though, she did not put it on at once, her hands, Lays' Chapel and all that and therein was, receded from her like a tide going out. And in its place was Cochran, sane, wholesome, full of kindly concern, yet expecting a good deal of her.

As he drew near—very near indeed—Molly lifted her head from her arms, faced about dazedly. For a long time she at him, speechless, not convinced altogether of his reality, though certainly he looked anything but incorporeal. She had dreamed so many times of his coming—she had almost ceased to hope.

"I'm afraid I startled you," he said but I couldn't resist the desire to take you by surprise. I knew I should "eat the wire, anyhow!"

"It's been so long," she managed to articulate at last. "I—I thought you had surely given me up."

He shook his head. "No, I haven't given you up. But tell me—you're not sorry you let me take the responsibility, eh?" He still kept her hands between his, and he did not let go her eyes, either, while he probed their hue depths with humorous intentness.

"No!" she laughed a little—"I never realized until this minute how dreadful it would be not to be alive!" The words came spontaneous, uncensored, but she had no wish to take them back. He could be trusted to understand what she meant.

"This minute . . ." he repeated questioningly. "Because you are here, of course," she said simply. "You don't suppose she finished on a lighter and more casual note, that a steady diet of Lays' Chapel for a year is calculated to make one value one's friends less highly, do you?"

"Hum—m—a rather unfair advantage for the friends, though, don't you think?" In his eyes there was an inscrutable effect of both light and depth. He drew Molly down to one of the desks near by, seated himself, a comical misfit, beside the one in
